

The Economist calls her “the real Enron whistleblower.” Recognized by the Nobel Peace Centre for her courage and leadership, Lynn Brewer is the author of Confessions of an Enron Executive: A Whistleblower's Story, a riveting account of her career at Enron, her decision to blow the whistle, and her fateful meeting with Ken Lay - just two weeks before his untimely death.

In her nearly three years at Enron, she was responsible for risk management in energy operations, the e-commerce initiatives for Enron's water subsidiary, traded power in the California markets and oversaw competitive intelligence for Enron Broadband Services. During her tenure she witnessed numerous instances of illegal and corrupt dealings, including bank fraud, espionage, power price manipulation and the gross overstatements to the press, public and financial world. She is one of the last to speak with former CEO Kenneth Lay about the trial, his conviction, the possibility of life in prison, his misgivings about the appointment of Jeff Skilling to succeed him, and the depth and betrayal of his political connections. She is perhaps the only one who can shed light on Ken Lay's knowledge of his heart condition that ultimately took his life.

Prior to joining the energy giant, keynote speaker Lynn worked in forensic accounting and spent 18 years as a legal professional in private practice until she joined Ralston Purina where she worked in corporate development for the General Counsel and Chief Financial Officer. Since leaving Enron, Lynn has captivated audiences worldwide providing compelling details into Enron's rise and fall, leaving audiences shocked when they realize how vulnerable they are to becoming the next Enron.

Today, she is the Founding Chair...

Testimonials

“You were amazing - bless you for having the courage to speak out. You have truly given me insight into the Enron disaster that I could not have possibly had without hearing you speak. It was well worth staying to hear your story.”

- Dr. William Bennett Former US Secretary of Education.

“In a day and age when people hate to wait in line it was amazing to see several hundred people lined up for over an hour so they could have an opportunity to meet you and receive an autographed copy of your book. You are an articulate speaker with a powerful and timely message.” of the audience was captivating.”

- National Alliance for Insurance Education & Research Lynn's Client.

Lynn Brewer

Speech Topics

- Women in Business
- Overcoming Adversity
- Management
- Leadership
- Inspiration
- Innovation

