Testimonials

From the moment you enter the elevator in the Waldorf Towers you are truly transported to a different age. It's the era of old New York — of speakeasies with private performances. Steve Cohen is wonderful. The tricks and illusions are amazing. There is no point trying to figure out how he does them. Just sit back and enjoy the magic. You feel like an honored guest or a patron. There is no stage. Just an intimate room where everyone is very close to the action. When it is over, you realize that you have witnessed a performance unlike any other. It's something that you will talk about for days and days. This is well-worth the wait for an available Friday or Saturday.

- Waldorf Show Attendee.

I originally saw a piece done on CBS Sunday Morning about a year ago. It was so intriguing I kept the info for my next trip to NYC. Good thing I booked about 3 months out since the show sells out quickly. It was so worth the $$$. Be sure and dress nice because everyone else does. And the Waldorf is worth going to early to walk around and enjoy before hand. This is a must see in NYC. You'll never see anyone like him and will be a believer for sure.
