

Boomer Esiason is one of the most respected broadcasters in sports due to his in-depth analysis and truthful personality. Since 2002, Esiason has been a lead studio analyst for CBS's "The NFL Today", the CBS Television Network's NFL pre-game and post-game program. In 2007, he debuted as co-host of WFAN's national weekday morning show "Boomer & Carton", alongside Craig Carton. The program became a top-rated morning show and was simulcasted on the CBS Sports Network running until 2017. On January 2, 2018, Boomer welcomed new co-host Greg Giannotti and the show was rebranded as the "Morning Show with Boomer & Gio" on WFAN as well as simulcasted on the CBS Sports Network. He served as an analyst on "Inside The NFL" on Showtime for five seasons (2014-2018). In addition, Esiason can be seen on the Saturday morning syndicated interview program "Gametime with Boomer Esiason" across CBS affiliates.

Upon retiring after the 1997 season, Esiason headed straight to the broadcast booth. He made his debut as a commentator for ABC's NFL "Monday Night Football," and called "MNF" games for two years. He called games for Westwood One Radio Sports "Monday Night Football" broadcasts for 18 seasons (2000-17), teaming with Marv Albert and Kevin Harlan for eight years each. He contributes daily commentary to CBS Sports Radio's "CBS Sports Minute" and is a weekly guest during the NFL season on 98.5 The Sports Hub in Boston. He was a weekly contributor for Bleacher Report's "Behind the Mic" and Sport Illustrated's SI.com. Esiason hosted "The Boomer Esiason Show" on Madison Square Garden Network for eight years. During the 2001 season, he served as an analyst on Fox Sports Net's "NFL This Morning."

Before gaining his stellar reputation as a broadcaster, t...

Boomer Esiason

Speech Topics

- ☐ Virtual Keynotes
- ☐ Sports
- ☐ Motivation
- ☐ Leadership
- ☐ Inspiration
- ☐ Celebrity

