

Whether it is his faith, his family or his football team, Edwards exudes passion in all areas of his life. That energetic and enthusiastic approach best defines how he approaches his task as head football coach at Arizona State University. With his diverse background in pro football either as a player, scout, an assistant coach or head coach, Edwards became one of five coaches in NFL history to take two different teams to the playoffs in their debut seasons with them.

Edwards has used his experience in football to serve as a positive role model and has been involved in numerous charitable efforts and philanthropic endeavors. Edwards founded the Herm Edwards Youth Foundation in 1985 as well as the Herm Edwards Youth Football Camp. The camp has allowed over one thousand kids a year to sharpen their football skills and learn valuable lessons from some of the NFL's finest teachers.

In recent years, Herm Edwards has been the head coach for Arizona State University. Herm Edwards and his coaching staff exceeded expectations during his first year in charge of the program, achieving several unexpected accomplishments and garnering national attention.
