Maulik S. Joshi, Dr.P.H., is president of the Health Research & Educational Trust (HRET) and senior vice president for research at the American Hospital Association (AHA).

As the independent, not-for-profit research affiliate of the AHA, HRET produces timely research on topics of critical interest to hospitals and health systems and the communities they serve, including business leaders and policymakers. HRET's current research agenda focuses on quality improvement, patient safety, community health, leadership in governance, and the elimination of disparities in health care delivery. The AHA is a not-for-profit member association of nearly 5,000 health care provider organizations and 35,000 individuals committed to the health improvement of their communities.

Before joining HRET and AHA, Dr. Joshi served as president and chief executive officer of the Network for Regional Healthcare Improvement (NRHI), an organization focused on building and strengthening multi-stakeholder regional coalitions to improve quality and contain health care costs. Dr. Joshi previously was senior advisor for the office of the director at the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ). He also served as president and chief executive officer of the Delmarva Foundation. During Dr. Joshi's tenure, the foundation received the 2005 U.S. Senate Productivity Award, the highest level award in the state of Maryland, based on the national Malcolm Baldrige criteria for performance excellence. In addition, Dr. Joshi was vice president of the Institute for Healthcare Improvement (IHI), co-founder and executive vice president for DoctorQuality, senior director of quality for the University of Pennsylvania Health System, and executive vice president of the HMO Grou...
