

Jane Bryant Quinn is a nationally known commentator on personal finance, with books and columns read and trusted by millions. In her long career, she has established herself as America's most reliable voice for people trying to manage their money well. In her public policy writings, she addresses matters of top concern to everyone, including investor protection, health insurance, Social Security, and the sufficiency of retirement plans.

She currently posts twice-weekly columns for CBS MoneyWatch.com, and a monthly column for the AARP Bulletin. She is the editorial director of Main Street Connect, a national community news company that she founded with her husband, Carll Tucker. MSC's reporters bring communities their local news and events online—today's equivalent of the great local of the past.

Her career includes one of the country's most successful newspaper columns, published twice-weekly and syndicated by The Washington Post Writers Group to more than 250 newspapers. It was still growing when she retired it, after 27 years. She wrote a biweekly column for Newsweek magazine for 30 years. She has also written a biweekly columns for Bloomberg.com and long-running monthly columns for Woman's Day and Good Housekeeping.

Quinn worked extensively in television. She hosted her own program on the Public Broadcasting System, a personal-finance series called Take Charge! She co-hosted an investment series, Beyond Wall Street, which also ran on PBS. She worked ten years for CBS News, first on the CBS Morning News, appearing twice weekly, then on The Evening News with Dan Rather. She has also been a regular on ABC's The Home Show as well as a guest...

Jane Bryant Quinn

Speech Topics

- Media/News Journalists
- Finance

Testimonials

“A good panel is only as good as its moderator, and you, Jane, were the best. You kept everyone focused and made sure the event was well-paced, lively and entertaining”

- Scudder Kemper Investments.

“I particularly want to thank you for being so encouraging to the students who came to hear you in the afternoon and also in the evening. You're an inspiration!”

- Eckerd College, St. Petersburg, Florida.