

Jonathan Tilley is a brand strategist who helps creative people transition into successful creative freelancers and entrepreneurs.

Besides his many accomplishments as a voice actor and ex-dancer, Jonathan is proud to have rolled around on the floor as a cat in his viral TEDx Talk, "What Creativity Is Trying To Tell You". His online course, League of List Builders has taught thousands of professional creatives how to build a business around their art and share their talent with the world.

He is the author of the self-published ebook Voice Over Garden, winner of the 2013 Small Business Book Award for Start-Ups, which has been called "a standing ovation" and "quite brilliant" by the voice over industry.

Since 2002, Jonathan also freelances as a voice actor having voiced thousands of corporate narrations and business presentations for companies like Mercedes-Benz, FujiFilm, Porsche, IBM, Siemens, KIA, Philips, BASF and also voiced commercials for Red Bull, Nivea for Men, Google, Sprite, and Coca-Cola.

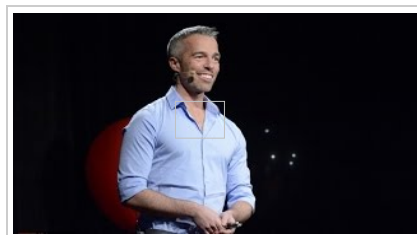

From 1999 - 2007, Jonathan could be seen in the blockbuster musicals "A Chorus Line", "Mamma Mia!", "Cats", "Dance of the Vampires", and "42nd Street". He was Assistant Associate Choreographer for the German and Russian productions of "Mamma Mia!" and choreographed runway shows throughout Europe for L'Oreal, Wella, and Intercoiffure. He can also be seen in the movie "Center Stage" filmed in New York City's Lincoln Center.

Seven random things Jonathan is interested in nowadays: walking his French bulldog Dexter, getting lost in old bookstores while simultaneously being lost in a new city, analyzing the price of precious metals, understanding the multi-layered resiliency of spirit, collecting fake leather biker jack...
