

Lauren A. Taylor is the co-author of "The American Health Care Paradox," released in November of 2013, and a presidential scholar at Harvard Divinity School, where she studies health policy and ethics. Taylor received a master's in public health at Yale, where she also worked as a program manager at the Global Health Leadership Institute. In that capacity, she led a research team in building a model for scaling up public health innovations for the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation.

Since the publication of "The American Health Care Paradox," Taylor has appeared on a variety of news programs, including MSNBC's "The Cycle," SiriusXM's "The Morning Briefing" and several NPR affiliates from New York to Seattle. To book Lauren Taylor call Executive Speakers Bureau at 901-754-9404.

Lauren Taylor

Speech Topics

- Healthcare
- Ethics

