

Valeisha Butterfield Jones is the Global Head of Community Inclusion at Google and the co-founder and CEO of the Women in Entertainment Empowerment Network (WEEN).

Valeisha has a deep passion for diversity and inclusion, as evidenced by her work for nearly two decades driving social responsibility campaigns and community engagement programs for corporations, government agencies and nonprofit organizations.

Her work received global recognition and in 2009, Valeisha was appointed to serve in the Administration of U.S. President Barack Obama as the Deputy Director of Public Affairs for International Trade and as the National Youth Vote Director for President Obama's 2012 reelection campaign, where she helped to deliver one of the highest youth voter turnouts in American history.

Valeisha has been recognized as one of our country's most respected leaders in business and philanthropy, including Forbes, Essence & Ebony.

Valeisha is a graduate of Clark Atlanta University and a North Carolina native but considers New York City her home away from home. She's married and the mom of a 3-year-old son.

Valeisha Butterfield-Jones

Speech Topics

- Women in Business
- Philanthropy & Volunteerism
- Diversity

