

In just a short time, and at a relatively young age, Seth Davis has established himself as one of the most accomplished and respected voices in the worlds of print and broadcast journalism. Seth is also an experienced Master of Ceremonies and public speaker whose motivational message Define Yourself is tailored to resonate with young and older audiences alike.

Since joining CBS Sports in 2003, Davis has become one of the faces of March Madness through his position as an on-air college basketball studio analyst. He serves as the lone analyst in the CBS studio during the network At the Half segments for all regular season games, and his reportage continues throughout the NCAA Tournament alongside his studio partners, Greg Gumbel and Clark Kellogg. During his tenure at CBS Sports, Davis has also contributed live segments to The NFL Today, he has worked as a sideline reporter on NFL football with Jim Nantz and Phil Simms, and he has served as host for CBS weekend Sportsdesk reports. In addition to his broadcast work, Davis is also a Staff Writer at Sports Illustrated Magazine, which he joined in 1995. Besides writing numerous features, he has authored the magazine weekly Inside College Basketball column and been a regular contributor to SI Golf Plus section. Davis work has been recognized several times by national writing organizations.

His 2003 profile of golfer John Daly earned him first place in the Golf Writers Association of America non-daily feature category. Davis is also a regular contributor to SI.com, where he authors his popular Hoop Thoughts column on college basketball.

Since 2002, Davis has worked as an on-air host, reporter and analyst for Colle...
