

Andrew Grant is an innovation for transformation specialist. He is the director of Tirian and author of 'The Innovation Race: How to change a culture to change the game' along with 'Who Killed Creativity?... And How Can We Get it Back? He is a highly experienced, humorous, and engaging presenter, who facilitates leaders & teams to enhance collaboration and innovation, using creative solutions. Andrew Grant has worked with world leaders in innovation to drive cultural change. An accomplished author, he has featured in global media and his educational programs and resources are used by Fortune 500 companies worldwide.

Andrew's significant success comes from the fact that he is not only able to talk intelligently and engagingly about the important elements of creative thinking and innovation, but it is easy to see in everything he does. He is a highly experienced professional presenter and facilitator, who will challenge leaders and their teams to think differently about innovation, collaboration and creative thinking. He is both globally minded and culturally fluent, resulting in sessions that are always relevant and sensitive to both the local mindset and diverse audiences. Andrew can present to an audience that is wanting outcomes delivered engagingly in an intelligent and interactive way (avoid the traps of pure entertainment, dry talks, childish games and gimmicks). Topics are presented with a unique blend of research and live playful humor, previously not experienced, with a specialization interactive focus. There is also the option of hybrid integrated workshops & gamified simulations to get people talking, collect audiences' input and develop action plans.
