

Nicole Lipkin is an internationally recognized keynote speaker, consulting psychologist, and best-selling author who focuses on human behavior, leadership, and mental agility. An entrepreneur since childhood, she currently serves as the CEO of Equilibria Leadership Consulting, an organizational and leadership development firm, and founder of HeyKiddo, a company dedicated to building the leadership, social, and emotional skills of children and their grown-ups.

By sharing her dedication to combining the science of human behavior with practical approaches to business and leadership, she has helped organizations like Google, Visa, the FBI, Hearst International, Honda, Toyota, ExxonMobil, Berkshire Hathaway, and more amplify their impact and drive positive growth throughout their organizations.

As a clinical and organizational psychologist by trade, she holds a doctorate in clinical psychology (Psy.D.), Master of Business Administration (MBA), and Master of Criminal Justice (MACJ) – and serves as an adjunct faculty member at the Center for Creative Leadership, as well as, an advisor to several boards.

Her goal as a keynote speaker is simple: to bring human nature back into the workplace by showing individuals and teams how they can spark more impact and change by better understanding their own psychology.

She lives in Philly with her husband, Matt, son, Charlie, and spunky cat, El Guapo Meatball. They can be found having killer living room dance parties at any given time.

Testimonials

□ Nicole is a vibrant and powerful speaker who is able to take complex psychological findings and make them relevant to an audience with little or no psychological training or experience. She was able to communicate these messages at a level that resulted in many dealers being moved to make significant business changes at their dealerships. □
